Trading involves a higher level of risk than other common forms of capital management such as long-term investments in stocks, bonds or mutual funds. Attaining proficiency in trading may take a long time to develop depending on the student's capacity to understand the high degree of risk involved, aptitude for proper risk management to preserve capital, and potential to develop all necessary skills to create profitable results.

The customer must understand that actions taken in trading result in the loss of all capital and in cases that involve the use of extended buying power and margin, one may lose all capital and subsequently assume the liability of owing additional funds that are substantially more than the initial capital.

“PropShopTrader OÜ” will not assume any responsibility due to losses an individual or group may incur as a result of attempting to follow any advice and/or recommendations given in our training programs. Taking our training programs does not guarantee success, and individuals or groups of users are solely responsible for any risks taken.

Before deciding to trade the financial markets, you should carefully consider your investment objectives, level of experience and risk appetite. Most importantly, do not invest money you cannot afford to lose. Trading is highly speculative, and it may lead to the loss of money or even insolvency. You could even lose more money than you invested, especially if you borrow money to trade. There is considerable exposure to risk in any form of trading, including, but not limited to, leverage, creditworthiness, limited regulatory protection and market volatility that may substantially affect the price or liquidity of a security or asset.

Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results. There are no guarantees of profit or of avoiding losses when trading. Hypothetical results have many inherent limitations and are not predictive of actual success. Testimonials are not indicative of future success and have not been independently verified.

CFTC RULE 4.41 – Hypothetical performance results have many inherent limitations, some of which are described below. No representation is being made that any account will or is likely to achieve profits or losses similar to those shown. In fact, there are frequently sharp differences between hypothetical performance results and the actual results subsequently achieved by any particular trading program. One of the limitations of hypothetical performance results is that they are generally prepared with the benefit of hindsight. In addition, hypothetical trading does not involve financial risk, and no hypothetical trading record can completely account for the impact of financial risk in actual trading. For example, the ability to withstand losses or to adhere to a particular trading program in spite of trading losses are material points which can also adversely affect actual trading results. There are numerous other factors related to the markets in general or to the implementation of any specific trading program which cannot be fully accounted for in the preparation of hypothetical performance results and all of which can adversely affect actual trading results.
